Dear Andi Ausrotas:

Congratulations! We are pleased to inform you that you have passed IAAP – Certified Professional in Accessibility Core Competency (CPACC) examination. Your hard work, study, and perseverance helped you achieve a significant goal – recognition of your skills and knowledge as an accessibility professional. You are one of only 7897 CPACCs that have been awarded worldwide

The IAAP CPACC program aspires to the following goals for accessibility certification:

- To define what accessibility professionals are expected to know.
- To increase the quality and consistency of the work performed by accessibility professionals.
- To provide accessibility professionals with a credential as evidence of their commitment to the accessibility field, and of their competence within the field.
- To provide employers, the accessibility community and the public with a metric to measure and assess the accessibility competence of current and/or prospective employees.
- To provide colleges, universities, and vocational programs with clear educational outcomes and a curriculum outline for teaching accessibility.
- To strengthen the community of practice among accessibility professionals.

Your achievement reflects your commitment to accessibility best practices and remaining current in your field through the continuing education required to maintain your certification. Your CPACC continuing education and professional development program will not only enhance your career, but also will allow you to improve the lives of others around the world.

On behalf of the IAAP Certification Committee, I congratulate you on your achievement. We look forward to working with you in the coming years.

Sincerely,

Samantha Evans, CAE, MBA
